To the Executive Director of Minority Groups and School District Leadership:

School districts now have legal obligations to deliver 100% of the children to kindergarten ready without definition of readiness or additional funding. Culture groups will become less and less accepting of the anything goes community's obligation to collaborate with the school district on really true even starts for their children. This local requirement for an even start will never go away and a range of readiness required, not codified, cannot be denied. This uncertainty is opportunity and a point to exceed past requirements with best practice.

First thing first readiness is defined in your district by those who are ready -- giving little long term space to wiggle with this issue. The gap can be avoided right at this point. It cannot be denied that everything would be positively different if the district saw to it that 100% of the children arrived really ready to read, count and understanding positive aligned expectations. The opposite is also true, a district can really fail right at this point. We will help you see how to make this a positive with no new taxpayer funded money or delay.
