

USA VALUES's Concept of Life's FTF Interactions

- A child has initial potential worth in excess of the parents on a present value basis. (chapter 28 of The Absorbent Mind by Maria Montessori). What we do and allow to happen with and to the child is all telling to a 85 year arc of opportunity to be valuable. This is the gift that the private sector gives to the public sector to operate within the circle that follows. The right track is to value that positive expectation from the earliest years and given our original sin sort based on that value (A). The world can not help sorting, it is real, it happens every day and it happen for every child. The left track of the circle is to ignore that value creation and build and make the younger dependent on other people's value (B).
 - A. The top of the sort, best, does not need the public sector values to position the child.
 - B. The bottom of the sort, worst, cannot position the child without the public sector and the public sector does not do one-on-one well.
- The concept of human capital within the private sector has emerged and is prepared to make first things first impact on all the children given access to NewOldMoney that has traditionally been made scarce because of our original sin and its sorting process. The sorting process result (outcome) is driven by the influence of mother. Mother's influence, and others before her, are positive, negative or neutral constraints to being best, worst or in between.
- Influence is the key word in positioning the age 6 child's value to exceed that of mom and the parents. Page 14 of The Absorbent Mind by Maria Montessori is clear about the early responsibility of those around what precedes the public sorting process described in chapter 28. The child is all important through the earlier the better influence of what by nature is first things first and costly without recovery when ignored.
